

Maitri Content Direction – Strategy, Monthly Scope, and Operating Plan

Content Strategy and Operating Plan

Prepared for	Prepared by
Shwetika Chandrashekar	Karan Chordia, Founder – Kramaniti
Date	Document purpose
1 September 2026	Research, strategic direction, and implementation planning for private discussion.
Status	Operating principle
Decision-support document; subject to legal, financial, regulatory, and technical verification where relevant.	Strategy before tools. Systems before scale. Human judgment remains accountable.

A practical, evidence-led plan for turning sector knowledge into durable operating value.

CONTENTS

Executive direction	9. Newsletter direction
1. Content commitment under the agreement	10. AI-assisted content workflow
2. Existing content foundation	11. Roles and responsibilities
3. Strategic content objective	12. Review and integrity controls
4. Audience and relationship model	13. Measurement for the first operating cycle
5. Editorial promise	14. Decisions required before activation
6. Content pillars	15. Immediate next actions
7. Source-to-distribution workflow	Conclusion
8. Proposed 30-day content plan	Source note

Executive direction

Maitri's content should make children want to know the companions and make parents trust the care behind the stories. It should not begin as a high-volume product-promotion engine.

The recommended content model is:

One approved Maitri source becomes a coordinated set of story, social, newsletter, parent, and short-video drafts. Human approval remains the release gate.

The content foundation already exists. The immediate decision is to activate it at a sustainable pace that fits the signed retainer and avoids expanding into heavy production without a separate scope.

1. Content commitment under the agreement

The Maitri Foundation Retainer includes the following content support:

Included area	Monthly commitment
Content direction	One 30-day content direction based on current priorities.
Social content	8-10 content pieces per month.
Copy support	Caption or script direction for selected posts.
Storytelling	Character-led storytelling angles and Manu-led themes.
Parent communication	Parent-education ideas and parent-facing message refinement.
Founder communication	Founder-update ideas and story-led founder direction.
Newsletters	Two newsletter drafts, subject-line suggestions, email structure, and CTA direction.
AI workflows	Basic workflows for content ideas, newsletter drafting, story expansion, and repurposing.
Review	Human-led final review and client approval before publishing.

The agreement does not include large-scale content production, active community management, graphic-design production at scale, advanced video editing at scale, paid media, influencer activity, professional shoots, or preorder-campaign architecture.

2. Existing content foundation

Maitri already has a developed content base:

- story-first positioning and message direction;
- Manu character bible and source story material;
- Manu and Badal story assets and activities;
- a 30-day Instagram and YouTube draft calendar;
- four Letters from Maitri source drafts;
- six current Instagram draft concepts;
- six current Shorts or Reels scripts;
- six parent-prompt and newsletter-style drafts;
- a two-week publishing calendar;
- six content pillars;
- claim and approval guardrails;
- a source-to-distribution workflow;
- a copy-ready Maitri Content Producer agent package.

The next content cycle should refine and approve this inventory rather than generate another unrelated content system.

3. Strategic content objective

For the next 30 days, content should achieve four practical objectives:

1. Introduce Manu as a friend before presenting her as a product.
2. Demonstrate Maitri's interpretation of courage through child-relatable moments.
3. Give parents a reason to trust and participate in the story world.
4. Invite interested families into the Maitri Circle without making unsupported product or delivery promises.

The objective is not maximum reach. It is a clear early signal of whether families understand the idea, respond to Manu, and want a continuing relationship with Maitri.

4. Audience and relationship model

Primary adult audience

Parents and caregivers looking for culturally rooted stories, meaningful play, representation, and thoughtful parent-child experiences.

Primary child relationship

Children should experience Manu as a curious, brave, kind, imperfect, and emotionally accessible friend. Content should invite imagination and conversation rather than deliver adult lessons in a child-facing format.

Secondary audiences

- grandparents and family gift buyers;
- Indian families living outside India;
- educators, librarians, and beta readers;
- parents interested in history, values, and representation.

Secondary audiences should not dilute the first 30-day message. Manu and the parent-child relationship remain the centre.

5. Editorial promise

Maitri should offer families a reliable content experience:

- a story worth sharing;
- a child-friendly moment of courage, curiosity, kindness, or resilience;
- a parent prompt that opens conversation;
- clear separation between history and inspired fiction;
- one gentle invitation to continue the relationship.

Content should feel warm, specific, culturally rooted, intelligent, and emotionally honest.

It should avoid:

- generic empowerment slogans;
- motivational posting without a story;
- adult brand strategy presented as child content;
- sensational historical claims;
- treating battle as the only form of courage;
- unsupported claims about materials, safety, compliance, manufacturing, price, preorder, or delivery;
- hard-selling before the product and operating facts are ready.

6. Content pillars

Pillar	Role	Example direction
Friendship	Make the companion relationship emotionally clear	Manu notices, listens, helps, or learns with another character.
Stories	Build attachment through narrative	A short scene from Manu and Badal or another approved story packet.
Imagination	Invite participation and play	Draw, imagine, choose, retell, or create a small story-world object.
Values in action	Show courage through behaviour	Asking why, trying again, being fair, staying close, or being kind first.
Shared reading	Create parent-child conversation	Read-aloud excerpts, discussion prompts, and reflection questions.
Maitri Circle	Build an ongoing relationship	Soft waitlist invitation, founder note, early-family participation, or learning update.

Values should be experienced through scenes and choices more often than listed as abstract concepts.

7. Source-to-distribution workflow

Every content batch should begin with one approved source packet.

Step 1 – Select the source

Choose one approved story scene, character insight, founder note, parent question, or validated audience learning.

Step 2 – Define the claim boundary

Record:

- confirmed positioning;
- verified historical anchors, if any;
- inspired or fictional elements;
- approved product facts;
- unresolved or prohibited claims;
- approved CTA.

Step 3 – Draft the derivatives together

From the same approved source, prepare the relevant combination of:

- website story or Letter from Maitri;
- Instagram carousel or static post;
- Instagram Reel script;
- matching YouTube Short script;
- parent prompt;
- waitlist or community invitation.

Step 4 – Review once as a batch

The review packet should show the source, every derivative, visual direction, claim notes, and exact approval question.

Step 5 – Publish and record

Record final copy, channel, date, URL, owner, source version, and approval date.

Step 6 – Learn

Record useful response signals such as saves, shares, completion, replies, clicks, signups, questions, objections, and parent feedback. Do not treat follower count alone as proof of the strategy.

8. Proposed 30-day content plan

The following plan uses 8 core pieces, 2 optional pieces, and 2 newsletters. It remains within the intended monthly content-direction scope when delivered as approved concepts, copy, and scripts rather than large-scale finished production.

No.	Format	Working theme	Purpose	Primary source
1	Instagram carousel	Maitri begins with friendship before products	Establish the brand belief	Approved positioning
2	Reel and Short script	Meet Manu as a curious girl	Create character attachment	Manu character bible
3	Static or carousel	Five everyday forms of courage	Make values child-relatable	Manu content set
4	Parent prompt	What is one brave question your child asked?	Encourage parent-child conversation	Letters from Maitri
5	Story carousel	Manu notices that Badal needs patience	Demonstrate tender courage	Manu and Badal source
6	Reel and Short script	Slow is still forward	Create a concise repeatable story beat	Manu and Badal source
7	Founder note	Why Maitri is being built carefully	Build trust through process	Approved founder input
8	Maitri Circle post	Join for stories, prompts, and early learning	Invite relationship without a hard sell	Approved waitlist promise
9	Optional activity	Create a courage crest	Encourage child participation	Manu activity source
10	Optional carousel	How Maitri separates history and inspired story	Make care and integrity visible	Editorial guardrails

Proposed publishing rhythm

Week	Focus	Recommended outputs
Week 1	Brand belief and Manu introduction	Piece 1, Piece 2, Newsletter 1
Week 2	Everyday courage and parent participation	Piece 3, Piece 4
Week 3	Manu and Badal story depth	Piece 5, Piece 6, optional Piece 9
Week 4	Founder trust and relationship invitation	Piece 7, Piece 8, Newsletter 2, optional Piece 10

This cadence may be reduced if review or production capacity is limited. It should not be increased merely to fill a calendar.

9. Newsletter direction

Newsletter 1 – Meet Manu as a friend

Purpose:

- introduce Manu through curiosity and everyday courage;
- explain why Maitri begins with story and relationship;
- invite a simple parent-child conversation;
- use a soft Maitri Circle CTA.

Suggested subject directions:

- Meet Manu, Maitri's first brave friend
- Before the queen, there was a curious girl

- A brave question can begin in childhood

Newsletter 2 – The courage to go slowly

Purpose:

- use the Manu and Badal scene to show patience and observation;
- connect the story to a practical family prompt;
- reinforce Maitri's tender interpretation of courage;
- invite families to continue receiving stories and prompts.

Suggested subject directions:

- Sometimes courage begins by slowing down
- What Manu noticed about Badal
- A quieter kind of brave

Final subject lines, historical notes, story copy, and CTA require Shwetika's approval before publication.

10. AI-assisted content workflow

AI supports structure and drafting. It does not replace founder, historical, child-language, product, or publishing judgment.

Agreement workflow	Proposed working system	Human authority
Content ideas	Content Producer generates options from approved positioning and source material	Karan and Shwetika select the direction.
Newsletter drafts	Content Producer adapts an approved source into a parent-facing letter	Shwetika approves message, founder voice, and CTA.
Story expansion	Story And Product Editor develops or reviews story possibilities	Historical, child-language, product, and founder review remain required.
Content repurposing	Content Producer adapts one approved source across Instagram, Reels, Shorts, and newsletters	The source and claim boundary cannot be changed without approval.
Feedback analysis	Signal Analyst organises waitlist, survey, beta-reader, and content response	Business decisions remain with Shwetika and Karan.
Priorities and records	Chief Of Staff converts meetings into decisions, questions, risks, and actions	Named decision owners approve and close the record.

11. Roles and responsibilities

Kramaniti within the current retainer

- propose the 30-day direction;
- develop 8-10 content concepts or drafts;
- provide selected caption and script direction;
- prepare two newsletter drafts;
- provide character-led, parent, founder, and Manu-led themes;
- organise review packets and decision requests;

- maintain basic AI workflows and content-repurposing guidance;
- provide a weekly progress summary and next-month priority list.

Shwetika and Maitri

- approve the source, message, claim boundary, and CTA;
- provide founder voice, product updates, story notes, and relevant factual inputs;
- identify or approve appropriate historical, child-safety, legal, educational, or product review where required;
- approve final copy and visuals;
- retain final publishing responsibility;
- provide or confirm platform access, publishing owner, and review turnaround;
- review response and make the next business decision.

Separately scoped production where required

- large-scale graphic design;
- final daily creative production;
- advanced video editing;
- recording, shoots, voice talent, or animation;
- daily publishing and active community management;
- paid advertising, influencer work, or campaign operations;
- advanced automation and detailed analytics dashboards.

12. Review and integrity controls

Every public content item should pass the following checks:

- Is the source approved?
- Is the central story beat clear?
- Is the language suitable for the intended child and parent audience?
- Are verified history, interpretation, and inspired fiction distinguished?
- Does the item avoid unsupported product and launch claims?
- Does the visual direction avoid presenting concept art as a finished product?
- Is the CTA appropriate for Maitri's current pre-launch stage?
- Is final Shwetika approval recorded?

Higher-risk material should receive specialist review where required. AI output is never treated as final authority on history, child development, safety, compliance, legal matters, or brand judgment.

13. Measurement for the first operating cycle

The first month should measure learning rather than vanity.

Signal area	Useful indicators
Character attachment	Saves, shares, story completion, repeated references to Manu, child or parent qualitative response.
Parent trust	Replies, questions, newsletter engagement, willingness to participate, and positive response to cultural and historical care.
Relationship growth	Waitlist signups, email interest, repeat visits, and participation in prompts.
Content usefulness	Saves, prompt responses, completion, clicks, and requests for more story material.
Objections	Repeated concerns about age, story fit, history, safety, price, product quality, availability, or delivery.
Operating quality	Approval turnaround, consistency, publishing completion, correction needs, and content reuse efficiency.

At the end of the cycle, the report should answer:

1. Which content created the strongest meaningful response?
2. What did parents or families ask repeatedly?
3. What remains unclear about Maitri or Manu?
4. What should be repeated, changed, or stopped?
5. What is the next decision supported by the evidence?

14. Decisions required before activation

The content meeting should close the following decisions:

1. Confirm the first approved Manu source.
2. Confirm the primary child age and reading mode for this content cycle.
3. Approve the proposed 8 core pieces and identify any replacements.
4. Approve the two newsletter directions.
5. Confirm the founder-note topic and source wording.
6. Confirm the Maitri Circle benefit and CTA.
7. Name the copy approver, visual approver, publishing owner, and response owner.
8. Set a realistic review turnaround.
9. Confirm which production work is handled by Maitri and which requires a separate Kramaniti quotation.
10. Confirm the first monthly reporting date and accessible data sources.

15. Immediate next actions

After approval:

1. Create and test the Maitri Content Producer in the selected account.
2. Build the first approved source packet.
3. Adapt it into the first social, Short, and newsletter batch.
4. Present one compact review packet to Shwetika.
5. Finalise only the approved material.

6. Publish through the named owner.
7. Record URLs, dates, and response signals.
8. Review the first results before increasing cadence or production complexity.

Conclusion

Maitri has enough strategic and editorial foundation to begin a disciplined content cycle. The next phase should make the existing thinking visible through a small number of approved, reusable, and measurable story-led outputs.

The content retainer should remain focused on direction, drafting, newsletter support, character-led storytelling, repurposing, and review. Heavy production and channel operations should be added only through a clear written scope.

Source note

Prepared from the signed Maitri Foundation Retainer agreement, Maitri's canonical strategic proposal, current character and product sources, the Month 1 Instagram and YouTube calendar, Letters from Maitri drafts, Content Studio, story-to-distribution workflow, agent packages, and existing decision and integrity guardrails. Draft content remains subject to Shwetika review and any specialist review required for historical, child-facing, product, legal, safety, or compliance claims.